Venora Hung is currently a lawyer at Oppenheimer, Wolff and Donnelly, a Minneapolis based law firm. She also spends her free time serving as a Regent on the Board of Regents at the University of Minnesota. Venora was elected by the state legislature in 2007 for a six year term ending in 2013. Her other prominent activity outside of work is volunteering for the Council of Asian Pacific Minnesotans (Venora was elected by the Governor for a four-year term in 2008) and she represents the Chinese American community.

Venora attended the University of Minnesota for her undergraduate education where she triple majored in Finance, Insurance and Risk Management and Management Information Systems. She also double minored in Entrepreneurial Studies and French. After college, Venora worked in England for six months in a finance/IT consulting role for Cargill. Immediately upon my return to the US, she worked for Cargill in their Corporate Accounting department followed by a stint in their Cargill Value Investment (now CarVal) business unit before going to law school.

When not engaged with the community, she personally enjoys travelling to places where she has friends, reading/skimming magazines, writing and dabbling in the art of cooking. Venora also like to read blogs on marketing/branding.
