

yelin_li@naaap.org

Yelin Li, the National Programs Manager of Retreat and Convention Programming, is a second-year graduate student at Brandeis University International Business School (IBS). She assisted the programming of 2010 NAAAP National Leadership Retreat, working closely with Chief Programming Officer Sally Wang. She also serves as the NAAAP Student Ambassador at Brandeis University. She works actively at Brandeis and created different innovative ways of campus outreach. She successfully organized students group to annual signature event of NAAAP Boston Chapter when it has only been four months since she became a member of NAAAP in June 2009.

At Brandeis University, Yelin majors in International Economics and Finance. She did her internship at Massachusetts Office of International Trade and Investment (MOITI) as a research associate and China's project coordinator. Her research paper of China's stimulus package supported the International Strategy Report of Massachusetts Governor Patrick. Brandeis University published her story named, "IBS Student Aims to Build Bridges to China".

Before Yelin came to Brandeis, she worked at Shanghai office of HSBC Group (China) private banking team. She got her B.A. in Economics from Shanghai International Studies University (SISU), where she initiated the first SISU Out Door Sports Association. She enjoys camping, rock-climbing and Chinese Kong Fu.